THE WATER IS CALLING, SO GO PREPARED

The Oregon State Marine Board and Parks and Recreation Department encourage people to seek reprieve from the heat this week by visiting a state park and local waterbody, but keep in mind that the water in many locations is still running swift and cold.

"There's just the right amount of water volume for all kinds of fun, but that also means the water may still be cold with a strong current," says Ashley Massey, Public Information Officer for the Marine Board. "If you're boating, make sure everyone has a properly fitting life jacket on board. All children 12 and younger are required to wear a life jacket when the boat is underway." Massey adds, "Even if you plan to go wade in the rivers' edge, make sure you are wearing a life jacket. Unseen drop offs, combined with swift current, can easily take people by surprise, with tragic outcomes. It's especially important with people who do not know how to swim."

Massey advises that if you do find yourself in a fast moving current, "make sure to float with your feet pointing downstream and have your life jacket straps secured to the jacket so they don't get tangled in any underwater debris." One misperception is that if a person is in distress, they can call out for help. "Actually, when a person is panicking, struggling for breath, they can't scream. This is why it's so important to always keep track of your friends and family when you're around the water. If you find yourself in the water unexpectedly, the key is to try to relax and float. You'll be able to catch your breath and hopefully get attention if you need it," Massey explains.

Other items you should bring along include sunscreen and plenty of water. Avoid drinking alcohol. Alcohol dehydrates the body and will easily impair a person's judgment, vision and coordination. "The reality is, people drinking when they're out on the water generally take risks they normally wouldn't take, and sometimes, with dangerous consequences," Massey adds. "Being outdoors catching rays is relaxing enough. Save the drinking for when you're safe at home."
